Students will seek out a metaphor or simile in their reading, consider the quote's context, then explain what they thin2nd gradeReading & Writing Figure of speech marked by explicit comparison Not to be confused with smile. A simile (/ˈsɪməli/) is a figure of speech that directly compares two things.[1][2] Similes differ from other metaphors by highlighting the similarities between two things using comparison words such as "like", "as", "so", or " than".[3] while other metaphors create an implicit comparison (i.e. saying something "is" something else).[1][4] This distinction is evident in the etymology of the words: simile derives from the Latin word similis ("similar, like"), while metaphor derives from the Greek word metapherein ("to transfer").[5] While similes are mainly used in forms of poetry that compare the inanimate and the living, there are also terms in which similes are used for very important things. Uses In literature "O My Luve's like a red, red rose." "A Red, Red Rose," by Robert Burns.[1][6] John Milton, Paradise Lost, a Homeric simile:[7] As when a prowling Wolf, Whom hunger drives to seek new haunt for prey, Watching where Shepherds pen their Flocks at eve In hurd'l d' Cotes amid the field secure, Leaps o'er the fence with ease into the Fold: So clomb this first grand Thief into God's Fold[8] In comedy Similes are used extensively in British comedy, notably in the slapstick era of the 1960s and 1970s. In comedy, the simile is often used in negative style: "he was as daft as a brush." They are also used in comedic context where a sensitive subject is broached, and the comedian will test the audience with response to subtle implicit simile before going deeper.[9] The sitcom Blackadder featured the use of extended similes, normally said by the title character. For example: Baldrick: I have a plan, sir. Blackadder: Really, Baldrick? A cunning and subtle one? Baldrick: Yes, sir. Blackadder: As cunning as a fox who's just been appointed Professor of Cunning at Oxford University? In languages other than English Given that similes emphasize affinities between different objects, they occur in many cultures and languages. Arabic Sayf al-Din al-Amidi discussed Arabic similes in 1805: "On Substantiation Through Transitive Relations". Vietnamese Thuy Nga Nguyen and Ghil'ad Zuckermann (2012) classify Vietnamese similes into two types: Meaning Similes and Rhyming Similes. The following is an example: Nghêo như con mèo /Ngũu như con mèo /"Poor as a cat" Whereas the above Vietnamese example is of a rhyming simile, the English simile "(as) poor as a church mouse" is only a semantic simile.[10] See also For a list of words relating to similes, see the English similes category of words in Wiktionary, the free dictionary.
