The manual dexterity taught when one writes is useful throughout life. Many schools now require that young students entering kindergarten be able to write the print manuscript alphabet, as well as their own names. This calls for free handwriting worksheets for parents and kids! It's especially important to teach good handwriting skills while students are in distance learning. But why exactly is it so important? Keep reading to find out why your students need great handwriting to thrive in the classroom!Handwriting greatly improves brain function in students. Maria Konnikova writes, "Children not only learn to read more quickly when they first learn to write by hand, but they also remain better able to generate ideas and retain information. In other words, it's not just what we write that matters — but how."Most of us already know that writing things by hand increases our chances of retaining that information, but the benefits go further than that. Handwriting actually activates more areas of the brain and boosts creativity. Konnikova cited a study that found that out of a group of children, "the ones with better handwriting exhibited greater neural activation in areas associated with working memory — and increased overall activation in the reading and writing networks."The research around handwriting shows it's not a skill to be forgotten, even while the world transitions to digital.
